Deadline: April 26, 2019

Join us for this two-and-a-half-day community and curriculum building workshop where we will:

- Discuss parallel and high-performance computing curriculum development strategies, successes, and ideas.
- Review existing course modules and tools for teaching.
- Learn about outreach and student engagement efforts.

Starting with classroom-tested modules and materials, participants will identify additional application areas that can serve as exemplars for different approaches to high-performance computing and help develop action plans for the creation of new modules.

Costs:
There is no registration fee. Housing, lunch, and morning/afternoon snacks will be provided. Participants are responsible for travel and all other expenses.

Organizers:

Aaron Weeden (aweeden@shodor.org), The Shodor Education Foundation, Inc.
Peter Hawrylak (peter-hawrylak@utulsa.edu), The University of Tulsa
Kate Cahill (kcahill@osc.edu), Ohio Supercomputer Center
